Respect

Hey friends! Today we will learn about respect. We will also answer a couple questions. What is respect? Well, respect can be an action or words. There are lots of ways to show respect.

Ways to show respect are saying "excuse me," "please," and "thank you," waiting for others to finish speaking before you talk instead of interrupting and talking over them, making eye-contact with the person you are talking to to show them that you are listening, being polite, and using a kind tone of voice, saying "ma'am" or "sir" to people in authority, not gossiping or starting rumors about others, being patient with others when they make a mistake, being kind, respectful, and positive to everyone around you, telling people that you "hear" them or understand them, even if you don't agree, helping people in need, asking questions to show that you are interested in what someone is saying, giving compliments to

Others, treating others how you want to be treated, picking up after yourself, respecting differences and similarities between others, showing random acts of kindness, giving someone a compliment, or holding the door for someone.

Well, that's 18 ways to show respect. And there are a lot more. Showing respect can be little things like holding a door for someone, or giving someone a compliment. Showing respect to others makes them feel happy and think positively about themselves and others. Respect is an important thing in life and can help us make more friends. Show respect to everyone and treat others how you want to be treated.

Caroline Carney
Tarleton School, East Newton
Courtney Corbin, Teacher